

Who Owns South Africa

Even as recently as a decade ago, eighty percent of all arable land in South Africa was still held by white owners, despite making up nine percent of the population. Following years of benefitting from every legal and sociocultural advantage, descendants of white European immigrants (Afrikaners) are now in mortal fear. Having lost some of the privileges handed to them by the de Klerk apartheid government, they've begun to rebrand their new position "white genocide."

The reassignment of stolen lands to black families is the root cause of their bitterness. The African National Congress follows a reliable model of willing buyer, willing seller as the preferred mechanism for redistribution of land wealth more fairly to black families.
