

Filipino nurses' exodus

Nurses from the Philippines in the West

Every year, as many as 8,000 nurses leave for Saudi Arabia, the United States, and some other nations. The president of the Philippine Medical Association says it's a "national crisis," predicting that their health care system will "certainly collapse" if the trend continues.

The average salary of a nurse drops by 95% in rural provinces.

